CASTLE HILL HUNT CLUB HAS SEMI-WEEKLY MEET

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Gordonsville, Va., November 25.—The Castle Hill Hunt Club held its regular semi-weekly "meet" yesterday afternoon, and the riders enjoyed a run taken at a tremendous pace, a pace that was remarkable even for this club, that is never daunted by a fast gait, a stiff fence or a wide water jump. A heavy rain necessitated a course with only two checks.

W. Waller Osborne was not out with the field, owing to a slight attack of the grip.

DEEP RUN HUNT DRAG WILL START FROM BEATTIE'S

The Deep Run Hunt Club's weekly drag will be held this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. The cast will be made at H. C. Beattie's place, and those intending to follow the hounds are requested to make note of the change. A large field is expected, and with good weather conditions the report should be good. A reception will be held at the Country Club after the drag.

POISON FOR ELEPHANT.

Five Hundred Grains of Cyanide of Potassium Given to "Grey Queen."

New York, November 25.—It took 200 grains of cyanide of potassium, a deadly poison, to kill the Grey Queen, a trick elephant, which was the subject of a death sentence passed on her for the murder of her keeper, Robert Schell, on October 23 last. Less than one grain is ordinarily fatal to man, and that convulsive symptoms supervene almost before the victim can set his teeth on the glass from which he swallowed.

At the Queen's death, which occurred on October 23, she was about ten minutes before she showed the least uneasiness, and it was forty-four minutes before she was pronounced dead.

The poison was given her in three gulleys of bran-mash, in which had been sprinkled 50 capsules, each of five grains of cyanide, she had been starved for twenty-four hours, and ate greedily.

The Queen was thirty-seven years old, born in Africa, and one of the largest elephants in captivity. She weighed 7,500 pounds, and stood eight feet seven inches high. Of recent years her temper had not improved, and last October she killed an unconscious keeper, who had been warned not to go near her, slammed him against the wall of her cell, and then trod him into pulp.

Change in Schedule—Southern Railway.

Effective Sunday, November 27, 1910, train 74, for West Point and intermediate stations, will leave Richmond at 6:30 A. M. daily, except Sunday, instead of 6:45 A. M.

For other changes effective November 27, consult Ticket Agent.

Since that time Richmond College has won five games and Randolph-Macon three, one resulting in a tie score. The games have always been hard fought and have attracted large crowds. The rivalry is intense, and neither school is willing to yield the palm in athletics.

For some time it was thought that the Ashland boys would be denied the privilege of attending the game, but President Blackwell has rescinded the original action taken by the faculty, and after receiving an apology from the students and a promise that the spirit of insubordination would not be shown again, has decided to allow the men to come to Richmond.

Because of this fact the resolution adopted by Richmond College in a spirit of magnanimous sportsmanship, declaring that the local school would not indulge in organized rooting unless Randolph-Macon was on hand to answer, is unnecessary, and the boys can now yell to their hearts' content. There is little need to add that the opportunity will be taken advantage of.

Davis of Richmond College, who has not been on the field since the first of the season because of an early injury, will be back at tackle in the game to-day. He is anxious to get just one more chance at the Yellow Jackets, and will be given an opportunity. He is a good man and was one of the stars of last year's team.

A large crowd is expected at the park. It will be a good game and will close the football season so far as Richmond is concerned. No predictions are in order. The best team will win, and each eleven is willing to wager that it is the "IT" of the Eastern Association.

Richmond College and Randolph-Macon will get together this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Broad Street Park for the purpose of determining whether the Yellow Jackets can claim the silver loving cup as football champions of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association. The Ashland team has met and vanquished every other team in the association. It is now up to Richmond to stop the triumphant march, if possible.

At the college last night a mass-meeting was held. The student body was addressed by many prominent local members of the Alumni Association. Words of good cheer were spoken and much advice distributed. The meeting took place in the chapel. Coach Long was the last man to put in a word. He stated that in his opinion the team had disgraced itself last Saturday, when William and Mary walked away with the game, and that the only way in which reputation could be made to the men at college for the loyalty with which the team has been supported was to win the game to-day. There were many cheers after the coach finished his talk. Then there were many cries of allegiance taken, and finally each and every man on the team promised to use his best endeavors to stop the tiger-coated crowd from Ashland. It was really an enthusiastic gathering.

Ashland Optimistic.

Over the telephone wires comes a story from Ashland that the team is in the very best of shape and ready for the contest. No predictions are made, but there is an air of assurance about the men walking the campus which augurs ill for the Spiders. Talking into consideration the fact that history has usually revealed that the team winning the exhibition game was doomed to defeat in the championship contest, the Ashlanders are provided with a hunch that the fact that Richmond won the game at the beginning of the season means a victory for the Yellow and Black to-day.

The championship games began in 1901. Since that time Richmond College has won five games and Randolph-Macon three, one resulting in a tie score. The games have always been hard fought and have attracted large crowds. The rivalry is intense, and neither school is willing to yield the palm in athletics.

For some time it was thought that the Ashland boys would be denied the privilege of attending the game, but President Blackwell has rescinded the original action taken by the faculty, and after receiving an apology from the students and a promise that the spirit of insubordination would not be shown again, has decided to allow the men to come to Richmond.

Shafts From Sportland

By G. MALBERT

With the conclusion of the football game between Randolph-Macon and Richmond College at Broad Street Park to-day the final curtain will be rung down on the football season of 1910. Richmond College is highly anxious to win this game. The season has not been one to which the school can boast with pride. The team has met some of the best teams in the South, but has lost all of its games in the contest to-day to win back lost laurels.

There is still another factor which will count much in the case. Richmond College has the highest regard for the Ashland school, still the men at the local institution feel that they should be superior in athletics even if they are not. The element of clean, healthy rivalry has supplanted the spiteful rivalry which existed between the two schools, but the desire to win has not been lessened. Randolph-Macon once took the cup for the championship from Richmond, and now Richmond will endeavor to keep the Ashlanders from winning.

From Ashland Coach Warren sends out good reports, and says that his team will give a good account of itself. The fact that Richmond College won the exhibition game played in the season is not regarded as indicative of any superiority on the part of the Spiders. To the contrary, it has been repeatedly stated in previous years that the team winning the exhibition game lost out in the championship contest. It has worked by opposites.

Dr. R. E. Blackwell, president of Randolph-Macon College, has made himself the popular idol of the town. His decision to allow the students to attend the game to-day, after the other places which had refused to him, was a master stroke of diplomacy, and he may count on the support of every student in college. Such a tact in the college world is really a rare thing, and the most telling way to bring the fellows to a realization of their mistakes. Incidentally, no more effective method of precluding any possible recurrence of the evil could have been hit upon.

The result of the whole matter will be to make the interest in the game more intense than ever, if possible. The game will be a magnificent and really magnanimous manner in which Richmond College met the issue. It is worthy of much favorable comment, and the action of the local institution in adopting a resolution to inhibit or to ban the students from the game should the Ashland student body not have been on hand to answer.

When the Army and Navy meet to-day it will be as much a society event as it will be a football game. At least that is the way most of those who will be on hand regard it. But to the two teams it will be fight all the way. Can't change at this late date, and the Army still looks good.

Wonder what College Topics is going to say about the game Thanksgiving, which Virginia tied up in a nest package and carried home. Then a student would say that the game was a turkey for all of the men and get ready for Christmas. As I have remarked before, next year is another year.

Towles, who played at guard for Virginia, is an old Richmond boy. He taught at McGuire's before going to Charlottesville. I am constrained to say that he is the longest guard in my recollection, but all the same he played a great game.

Harvard has clearly put it all over

Overwhelms Chester High School, Winning by Score of 75 to 0.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Port Union, Va., November 25.—Port Union Academy closed its football season here to-day by administering an overwhelming defeat to the Chester High School team, the final score being 75 to 0. The game ended the slaughter. The visitors were completely outclassed. Near the close of the game the Port Union boys worked off successfully the famous Indian trick. The ball was put under Quarterback Bailey's sweater, and he carried it on down without serious trouble.

The bright and redeeming feature of the visitors' work was that of V. P. L. all-Southern star of 1905, who played a spectacular game.

For the locals the playing of the entire team was left edge. The work of Bailey, Daniel, Kite, Justis and Captain Vaughn standing out prominently.

The Port Union boys have won one game this season. Coaches Douglas and Griffin are well pleased with the record of the eleven.

STUDENTS WILL SEE CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Faculty Withdraws Its Ban, and Randolph-Macon Boys Will Root for Team Against Richmond College To-Day.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

Ashland, Va., November 25.—Joy, wild, unrestrained and overwhelming reigns in the Yellow Jacket camp to-day. The president of the college, Dr. R. E. Blackwell, announced after a faculty meeting this morning, that the students would be allowed to go to Richmond on Saturday to see the game against Richmond College. The decision came after the presentation of a letter to the faculty from the students, in which they asked for a reconsideration of the case and the privilege of going to the game. The faculty decided to turn the entire matter over to the students, and the students, in turn, president went carefully over the trouble from the beginning, taking into consideration the statement of the students that their action was intended as neither disrespect nor insubordination, and the apology for the appearance made by the faculty. The president, in appreciation of the action on the part of the Athletic Association of Richmond College, hereby extended to that association for their sportsmanlike and courteous action our unanimous vote of thanks.

N. M. FISHER, W. R. PEATROSS, Committee.

Appreciate Action of Rival College

Following the sportsmanlike action of the Richmond College students in regard to organized rooting at the game to-day against Randolph-Macon, the students of the Ashland school, at a meeting held this morning before the game, the faculty was withdrawn, adopted the following resolutions:

To the Athletic Association of Richmond College from the Athletic Association of Randolph-Macon College:

Whereas the Richmond College Athletic Association have, by resolution, unanimously adopted, and shown evidence of sympathy for, the position in which the student body of Randolph-Macon College has been recently placed; and

Whereas the sympathy in those resolutions extends to the point that Richmond College voluntarily agrees to refrain from organized rooting against Randolph-Macon College in the game that is to be played Saturday; he it

Resolved, That we, the Athletic Association of Randolph-Macon College, in appreciation of the action on the part of the Athletic Association of Richmond College, hereby extend to that association for their sportsmanlike and courteous action our unanimous vote of thanks.

The Surprise of the Season.

"He Fell in Love With His Wife" is hardly an attractive title for a play, and the paper posted about on the walls and in the windows of the town is the cheapest description. It is a play utterly out of the ordinary was being offered, and the company was of a high order of merit.

The first act is set as the interior of a farm house, owned by James Holcroft (Charles Mackay), a widower who has employed incompetent or slatternly women to keep house for him. The condition of the room shows absolute neglect, and he himself comes on, unshaven, tired and surly, but it is so one apparent that he is very much of a man, and he reaches the limit of his endurance. He fires both of the women, and with them the pathetic little daughter, Olive, one who has been employed as his housekeeper, a vain, silly, ignorant dunderhead, who has left all the work for the child. At the end of the first act, the play comes to an unfortunate, but blameless young woman, who is on her way to the poor house. She is a girl of great refinement, and she comes to a sudden resolution, and proposes that they become married, solely as business partners.

She hesitates, then accepts, and the partnership begins.

This act is not pleasing. It is a comedy, almost a farce, in its dreary harshness, in spite of the fact that the comedy work of several of the characters. But with the second act everything is changed. The curtain goes up on the doorway of the farm house, and an unusually good setting it is, with its bits of stone wall, its well-kept trees, the old-fashioned well-beam, the turnstile, and the old-fashioned gate.

It is apparent that the partners are beginning to think less of the business end of their arrangement, and the play brightens. The clean, genuine comedy begins to show its head, and has an opportunity to realize the ability of the cast, and in particular, the real power of Charles Mackay, who, as James Holcroft, is so thoroughly a man, so big and strong and forceful, that the house is glad with him—glad to see him shaven and clean and ready to go. (Too, Arda La Croix, an old-time character man and stage manager, who plays Jonathan, the hired man, gets his chance to put across a clever comedy work as one of the men, and Harry J. Lane (once Toby in "Polly of the Circus"), as Milo Peasley, who, in the first act, when he was selling somebody's "Gems of Knowledge," got off a marvelous "spiel" concerning the merits of his work, played with Evangeline Hawkins (Bernie Harris), one of the prettiest little scenes ever written, in which Miss Gorman also
